THE CANADIAN GOLD FIELDS.

They Do Not All Lie in the Yukon.

The exhas drawn a great many peo-

Yukon in the search for gold, and has diverted the attention of many others. But in order to get there it is necessary that a man should be possessed of the best of health, strong powers of endurance and considerable means. He eaves his wife and his family for a considerable period, and the hardships he has to endure are all unknown to him.

Canada has other gold fields, though. They are the fields that produce her golden grain. This year the crop of Manitoba, lying directly north of North Dakota, yielded 21,000,000 bushels of wheat alone. The current price averages 76 cents, which, as a local paper puts it, "makes the product in gold this year, for wheat alone, equal to a value of $15,960,000." Twenty thousand farmers did this, or an average to each producer of about $798. "But these same farmers are not live ing by wheat alone. This is only one source of revenue to them out of many. They have also beef, butter, potatoes, oats, barley and poultry to sell, and sometimes other things, so that it may be fairly estimated that their incomes will average at least $1,000 per farmer. Thus Manitoba's fields have yielded this year fully $20,000,000 in gold, divided among 20,000 actual producers, and a general population of about 200,-

After counting the cost of stamp mills, expenses of men, etc., rich as is the Klondike, such vast wealth as is being taken out of the soil in raising wheat in this one province, cannot possibly be secured in any mining district. Of course mining development assists agricultural development, and that is why the Government of Canada feels so much assurance in predicting prosperity to all who take up farms in Canada. Western Canada today promises more than any other known field that is open to immigration. Farms of 160 acres, capable of producing the best No. 1 hard wheat, yielding thirty to forty bushels to the acre, are given away free. Railways, markets, schools, churches—all are convenient. The Canadian form of government is one of the most liberal known, and a hearty welcome is given to settlers of all nationalities. Already there are many set-tlers gone in from the states, and the reports from them are highly favorable. Those desiring information as to free homestead laws, low transportation rates, etc., will have pamphlets, etc., sent free on application to the Depart-ment of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any agent of the Government.

KITES FOR THE WAR.

Claims Made by Mr. Eddy-Superior Advantages of His Little Contrivances Over Balloons in Naval Warfare-Photographing the Unsuspecting Enemy. William A. Eddy of Bayonne, N. J.,

teur photographer, a few days ago transmitted to the navy department at Washington his plans for the use of kites and cameras in reconnoitering from the decks of war vessels. Mr. Eddy has conferred with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt about the matter, says the New York Herald. "In regard to this proposed method of photographing below the horizon line," said Mr. Eddy. "I have studied men of and was benefitted."

"I took many different medicines, in fact I took medicine all the time, but nothing seemed to do me any good. "I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and some of my friends recommended them highly. I made up my mind to try them. said Mr. Eddy, "I have studied men of war and the positions of their masts with great care during the last two years, and I am satisfied that on the regular armor clad ship the best position for the kites to be flown from would be the foremast, and that a pulley block fastened there would lift the camera apparatus entirely beyond interference with the rigging. My plan would be to use six cameras set in the form of a hexagon on a circular platform, this platform to be prevented from revolving by a light boom set out from the kite string, and each camera numbered to correspond with a chart kept on the deck." He explained that if the direction of the kites altered through a change in the wind it could be instantly observed and the chart shifted to correspond. Then small photographs would be taken every few minutes by his battery of cameras and could be developed within five minutes, so that any object they showed could be observed. It would not be necessary, he says, to wait to wash and print the negatives. Should something that looked like a warship be noticed on one of the plates it would be only necessary to send up a large camera to take a photograph in that same direction, and then it would be determined from that plate what kind of a vessel it really was. "Men-of-war can be discerned, I am satisfied, from my experience," says Mr. Eddy, "at a distance of forty-three miles with such definiteness that an idea of the power of the vessel could be obtained, although I do not think that either the men or the cannon could be positively counted. However, I have photographs of the Blue Hills observatory, ten miles south of Boston, in which the horizon line is visible at a distance of forty-four miles. Even if only a mass of smoke or the black hulls of vessels could be discerned on the negatives it would be of great value. I understand that the ships of the German navy are to be painted pea-green to protect them from observation from balloons. Balloons are entirely impracticable on men-of-war. as they are liable to instant explosion from any spark and owing to the large quantities of explosives aboard, some of which might be loose on deck if an action were immi-national yacht race." Another great advantage which Mr. Eddy claims for kite reconnoisance is that, owing to the small surface which they present, his kites could not possibly be detected by an enemy who was below the horizon, so that in case of a war a United States ship might have a picture showing a hostile fleet, the number of vessels and the direction in which they were traveling, without their having the slightest idea that they were observed. Mr. Eddy does not believe that enlargements from kite pictures would be of any more value than the pictures themselves, as, he says, the defects are magnified equally with the good points. but he has been assured by expert photographers who have examined his work that with telescopic lenses he can still obtain instantaneous photographs and with much greater definition. Mists and heavy rain are what he most fears, but they likewise would defeat any other means of longdistance observation. As a practical example of his work Mr. Eddy exhibits a picture taken from Bayonne showing the snow line of the Orange mountains about twenty miles away, and the shores of the Kill von Kull, with an excellent bird's eye view of the interlying country. From this Mr. Eddy avgues it would be possible in case of need to send steam launches close to shore where the larger vessels could from them obtain views which would accurately define the positions of approaching bodies of troops, but he does not expect to get accurate photographs on shore at as long a range as he can get at sea, as the dark masses of forest foliage would destroy the detail unless, indeed, the country should be covered

In some of the Chicago railway yards compressed-air brooms are employed for sweeping and dusting the carpets and upholstery of the cars, and the results are said to be satisfactory. The compressed air is led from a powerhouse through an underground pipe, to which a hose is attached in the caryard. Affixed to the end of the hose is an iron nozzle as long as an ordinary broom handle, and having at its extremity a fixture of brass about a foot broad, and furnished with a long slit a thirty-second of an inch in width, through which issues the compressed air at the rate of seventy-five cubic feet a minute. and wife He little knew with what pride, indifference, contempt, and dislike he would have to do battle. He knew, too, that, as a rule, all interference between husband and wife was worse than useless—that, if they quarreled themselves, they would allow no one else to interfere in the quarrel. But this was not a mere quarrel—it was far worse.

"I would give something," thought, "to restore harmony; but of she said; "you will want nursing and looking at her, and she drew aside the course all depends on what she is taking care of. You must be well skirts of her robe to let him go by.

What was she like? After being at the opera she would not rise until late, he felt sure. He himself went downstairs early-Sir Raoul liked the fresh morning air.

The first sound that fell upon his ear was the singing of a bird, and the next the falling spray of a fountain. He looked around. He saw then what improvements had been made in Halby House. A censervatory had been built out from the breakfast room, long and wide—a conservatory that was almost an aviary, so full was it of bright plumaged birds; a fountain stood in the midst, masses of brilliant bloom glowed upon the walls.

'This was a welcome for the bride,' thought Sir Raoul. "Perhaps, however, she has not much taste for flow-

No one seemed to be about; the breakfast table was prepared, but there was no one to preside. Sir Raoul looked round; he thought he would go through the conservatory, and perhaps by that time there would be some news of breakfast. He opened the glass door and walked through a fairyland of sweet blossoms; the spray of the fountain fell with melodious music into the clear basin below.

"How beautiful!" thought the simple soldier.

He waited on until he saw a vision that suddenly struck him dumb. At the end of the conservatory was a large, vine-wreathed door, the green leaves formed a perfect screen, and against them stood a figure such as Sir Raoul had never seen before and never afterward forgot-a tall, graceful, girlish figure—a figure that was all symmetry, with a slender, graceful neck, white as snow, lovely shoulders. round, white arms, draped in elegant morning dress.

The lady was standing with her face averted so that he could not at first see it. He beheld a queenly head, covered with masses of black, shining hair. He stood for some minutes lost in admiration; and then with a deep sigh she turned slowly round.

If he had thought the figure beautiful, he was even more enchanted with the face. He saw dark star-like eves fringed with long lashes, and an imperial brow; he saw a mouth that was like a pomegranate bud, fresh, red, and indescribably lovely; he saw a splendid face, oval in contour, and with the exquisite coloring that Titian gives in his pictures, dainty and brilliant. Yet over the beauty of the face sadness bung like a veil. He saw the glow of a scarlet geranium in the bodice of her dress, and one in the dusky depths of her jet-black hair.

That it was the money lender's daughter never for a moment entered his mind—that he saw before him his cousin's wife never occurred to him. This beautiful girl was, of course, a visitor like himself-one of Lady Caraven's friends, he thought to himself. half sadly. It was not to be wondered at, with this glorious young beauty near to distract him, that the earl did not care for his wife.

He went forward to speak to her, and then for the first time she was conscious of his presence. She raised her dark eyes and looked at him. There are moments in life not to be forgotten-this was one. The dark eyes appeared to look right into his heart, and he seemed to recognize the soul that shone through them. She walked up to him, still looking at him, as though drawn by magic to him, his eyes half smiling into the depths of hers. He bowed at her approach.

She looked for one half minute into the worn, scarred, noble face.

He had reason to know that she was as tender of heart as she was fair of face, for that same morning the old "Nay, how can you say so? The first dinner bell had rung when the earl returned, and Sir Raoul did not looking into his face, she could not see him until dinner time. It was of white-white that shone and gleamed-with picturesque patches of scarlet. She wore scarlet and white flowers, with a suite of opals. Big Hats and Headache.

The enormous hats worn by some ladies of the present day are said to cause a peculiarly irritating kind of headache. The weight of these hats in itself is too heavy for the delicate cranium of a woman, but worst of all is the anxiety the lady must feel in keeping such a thing poised on her head. A physician who was consulted prescribed the usual remedies for what ladies called the migraine, but strongly advise them to put aside such headgear and wear light, reasonable bonnets. This physician says that, although he is no alarmist, he is of opinion that the exaggerated hats overladen with ornaments which many ladies now wear are responsible for a good deal of the peevishness, fretfulness and incipient mental aberratio which characterize so many who pride mortars, as also are Fort Schuyler, Wil- ment, only one of several departments, themselves on being in the fashion.

The number of money order offices in the United States has increased sympathy and compassion; they rested from 419 in 1865 to 20,031. Petitions of Coast Cities.

Now that the government has entered upon a definite policy of constructing and equipping sea coast defenses to meet the exigency of war, scores of persons representing various cities and towns on the Atlantic and gulf coasts have applied to the war department for a generous share of the expenditures to be made for such purposes. As a rule the administration refuses to be impressed by the petitions for defense at particular points. The definite policy has already been adopted of following the judgment of the army engineering corps, modified | Mexico is said to be preparing a grand by the advice of army officers, whose opinions in strategic matters are expert. The war department has answered all inquiries in reference to new coast defenses with the statement that no additional projects will be considered. An Adventure with a Panther. Mr. Wilfrid H. Luck (assistant superintendent of police), fourth son of Mrs. Luck of Hartlip, Sittingbourne, while out shooting with two friends on Jan. 9 in the jungle near Dhulla, Bombay presidency, was terribly mauled by a panther. He had wounded a parther, which, however, charged up the tree from which Mr. Luck had fired. Mr. Luck hit the beast over the head with the butt of his rifle, and kicked it in the jaw, but it was of no avail: he was dragged out of the tree and the two fell over and over together a distance of fifteen feet. Fortunately, at this moment, when almost all hope had died away, Mr. Keys, hearing a shout, came down from his tree and ran to the aid of his companion. The panther, rising from the senseless body of Mr. Luck, charged Mr. Keys, who met the beast on the barrels of his rifle, killing it on the spot, and thus saving the life of his companion. Mr. Luck writes: "Fortunately, the panther was an old one and his teeth much worn. We must have fallen together, and I on top, as I was not much hurt, although falling fifteen feet. THE McKINSTRY CASE.

When the charge was first preferred against Mr. McKinstry the Times took the position that if he was guilty he should be punished, and if he was innocent it was doing him an injustice not to have him stand before the world as cleared from all imputations He is practically charged with comas to his honesty. The above editorial reference to a ease that ought to be dropped, now that the defendant has escaped the act, is unfair and unwise. The case was postponed several times, but not once upon the application of the prosecution. Each and every motion for postponement was made for McKinstry's benefit. THE SENTINEL says it is not necessary to bimetallism that a metal coin should ever issue from the mint. As the world progresses, the use of the metal coin decreases, checks, drafts, postal and express orders taking its place. This is good republican doctrine and what the republicans tried in vain to force the silver monometallists to acknowledge two years ago. As a fact, only five per cent. of commercial exchanges are effected by metal coin, and this is a sufficient anvalue of gold. His confession that metal coin is not necessary takes the ground from under him.—Ypsilan-

Before showing the absurdity of the Ypsilantian's position let us say it is a falsehood to claim that silver men -no friend of silver is a monometallist—ever denied the fact that the more convenient representatives of actual money, as they come more generally into use, make less necessary actual coinage of the basic metal or

The contention of the Ypsilantian that the use of representative money lessened the burden upon the basic metal, is silly. Ultimately all representative money must be redeemed, and the standard has value in proportion to the supply of the metal composing it. In illustration we may take the familiar "board of trade method of gambling. Not a grain of wheat is bought or sold in a bucket shop, yet the value of wheat must determine the settlement. If a bull like Leiter can corner the world's supply, up it goes, and the bears lose, although they may never have seen a cent's worth of grain.

We use checks, drafts, etc., just as the gambler uses "chips," and their value depends upon the responsibility of the issuing concern. Their use does not lighten the burden upon the supply of basic money.

We contended that metal coins were not necessary to bimetallism, not that they were useless as money. We hold that bimetallism means a basis of final redemption composed of two of weight and fineness, but upon the turer of today. demand upon the supply of the metal both coined and uncoined. The

The Ypsilantian fears silver monometallism as a result of a restoration of the conditions prior to 1893. In endeavoring to show Bro. Osband what he is determined not to know (that essential) we have given him excuse not has been the subject of amusement among his employes.

Michigan Students at the Univer-

Some interesting statistics have been prepared recently with reference to Michigan students at the University of Michigan. These statistics show that out of 3,000 students or theaeabouts, now in attendance apon the University, 1,754, or about sixty per cent., are registered from some part of Michigan. In this registration seventy counties and 295 cities and towns are represented. The representation in the various departments is as follows: In the literary department, 450 men, 415 women; in the law department, 267 men, 3 women: in the engineering department, 192 men, 1 woman; in the medical department, 191 men, 22 women; in the hom copathic college, 31 men, 2 women; in the dental department, 128 men, 4 women; in the school Michigan women, 448.

Owing to the fact that the Ann Arbor school for the University, and also to the fact that many persons annually take up their residence in Ann Arbor, solely for the purpose of educating their children, the city of Ann Arbor furnishes more students to the University than any other two cities 3 34 in the state. The figures for the leading cities are as follows: Ann Arbor 331, Detroit 189, Grand Rapids 95, Saginaw 56, Battle Creek 34, Bay City 30, Jackson 29, Lansing 27, Kalamazoo 26, Ypsilanti 19, Port Huron 18, Flint 18, Coldwater 17, Calumet 16, Owosso 16, Lake Linden 15, Sault Ste, Marie 15, Howell 15, Manistee 14, Ishpeming 13. More than two-thirds of the total number registered come from towns of 12,000 population or under, or from the neighborhood of such towns.

The upper peninsula is represented by by 123 students, the lower by 1,631. From the three lower tiers of counties come 1,088 students, from the remainder of the lower peninsula 543 students,

If the lower peninsula be bisected by a line drawn from Mackinaw City south through the center of the state, the western half sends 561 students to the University, the eastern half 1,070 students.

Leaving out of the reckoning Washtenaw, Wayne, Saginaw and Kent counties, the two counties which send most students to the University this year are Oakland in the lower peninsula, which sends 46, and Houghton in the upper peninsula, which

A Corning minister denounces minstrel entertainments as low and degrading, and there is excitement in consequence because some leading citizens of the town propose to play in that line for charity. The essentials of these shows are fun and music, and they may be as legitimate as good acting and good preaching. Are we to believe that because they are enjoyable they must necessarily be bad?

Russia has ordered the immediate expenditure of 90,000,000 rubles for the construction of warships, a sum representing about $70,000,000, the purchase price of eighteen battleships. This does not represent a great fleet, nor will its addition make Russia a naval power of the first importance. The great significance that lies in its expenditure is the fact that to raise this amount no loan is asked, no credits sought for outside of Russia itself.

It is announced that the currency measure which has been introduced in the Indian Legislative Council at Calcutta is intended to meet the extreme pressure from which the Indian money markets are now suffering. The plan provides for an issue of currency notes in India against the deposit of gold in London to the credit of the Indian treasury. In this way it is expected to supply additional circulation in India and at the same time obviate the shipment of gold from England to that country, which on several occasions during the past year had been considered a likely proceeding. It also facilitates the operations of the Indian finance department in connection with its gold payments in London.

He finds that the by-laws of the trust are in violation of the law preventing unlawful combinations in restraint of trade, and also finds that the trust interferes with interstate and foreign commerce. Judge Morrow says: "It apnears to me that the constitution and by-laws of the Coal Dealers' association come within the prohibitions of the anti-trust act and are therefore unlawful" In accordance with the decision the temporary injunction will be prepared by the United States District attorney, and unless the case is carried to the Supreme court the business of buying and selling coal in this city will not be interfered with by any combine. It is doubtful if the trust will appeal, as Judge Morrow's rulings were against it on every point, and there is small hope of victory to be gained by prolonging the fight.

"Libraries? They look more like bee-hives!" was the recent exclamation of a stranger, as he saw the Hon. J. H. Stout of Wisconsin locking the doors of some wooden chests. On learning afterward that this philanthropic gentleman had, at his private expense, fitted out thirty such traveling libraries to circulate among Wisconsin towns, he further amplified his figure: "Yes, bee-hives! for it is not the honey a man eats, but that which he hives for others, out of which he gets true happiness."

Breeding and Feeding Hogs. (From Farmers' Review Special Report of Kansas Improved Stock

Breeders' Association.) J. T. Lawton said: In discussing this question I shall confine my remarks to my own practical experience while breeding and feeding hogs. I have found that to be successful the breeder has a great many points to study, that there is considerable more to do than to permit animals to mate or couple at will. The successful breeder must be possessed of the closest and keenest discrimination that his judicious selections will perpetuate only the survival of the fittest. He must bear in mind that the same physical defects occurring in both parents will likely be intensified in the offspring, a defect which will at least be doubled. I will mention a mistake of my own that I boar of one of the most prominent breeders in the country. He was admired by everyone who saw him. They told me I had a hog now that would be hard to beat in the show ring. I thought so, too. I crossed that hog with some of my best sows, expecting to get something fine, something that would bring me fancy prices. Imagine my surprise when most of my pigs from him showed a defect that I had not noticed in either of the parents, but which I could not help but notice in the offspring. We might find some defect in every hog, but the successful breeder must study close the defects of his own herd, and when he makes a selection be sure that the hog bought does not have the same defects as his own, or it will sooner or later be seen in his herd, defects that will not take an expert to show them to him. One it was two or three years before. A great many breeders do not pay as strict attention as they ought to when they purchase new blood for their herds. They recognize at the time that there are defects plain to be seen even by the inexperienced eye. They make the purchase, knowing well that the same defect exists in their own herds. But then the individual traces to some hogs that have gained a reputation. Hence the pig must be all right. I have always looked upon inbreeding as unsafe, the breed may likely have good results for a while, but I must acknowledge that I do not consider myself competent to steer clear of all the physical defects that are hidden and which are likely to show when we mate related animals. There may be some who consider that they possess the ability to guard against any bad effects. I would be afraid that sooner or later I might be like the sea-tossed mariner without a compass, drifted on to some unknown rock, where all hope of a prosperous voyage would be dashed to pieces, nothing remaining but the wreck. As there is a vast amount of credulity in the young breeder, it is absolutely cruel to start them out without warning. It is necessary that the young breeder exercise some skill in order to achieve his purpose. It is a mistake that some make in thinking that the breeder has nothing to do but to sit down and watch the stock grow.

The remark is often made that there is money in hogs. There is if you know how to get it out. To the breeder who dress, they are strictly just, though exerts himself there is sure reward. Now, for brood sows, I prefer animals that are not coarse, but growthy. You tendency with a vigorous, compact and blocky male. The dam should be

Manuring for Potato Crop.

Natural barnyard manure has althe potato as for nearly all other crops. Its liberal application will be returned by the tubers in a golden harvest. Whether the land be wet or dry, and whether the season be wet or dry, manure is none the less needed. In dry seasons the ground that has been liberally treated to barnyard manure is particularly noticeable. We have been even surprised to see how the crops on such land stand up in the face of the most withering heat and pro- reasonably expect a yield of forty tracted drouths. Last year we had a bushels per acre, or an increased yield little dry weather. On one field most of 25 per cent. The land will require of the vines weakened and withered 25 per cent less labor to break and prebefore the harvest. But there was one pare it for planting. If the plowing is place where a wagon load of manure | done in good season the soil will turn had been dumped and a good deal of over so thoroughly pulverized that a it still remained on the ground. There | single harrowing is all that will be rewas not, however, enough of it to kill quired to make the seed bed as good out vegetation. The vines on that spot as can well be desired (if the soil has Rept green and vigorous all through not been tramped with stock). In some the season. The reason doubtless was instances we have known the soil so that the manure enabled the plants to fine and mellow when broke that the make a strong growth and send down | planter followed close to the breaking, roots far into the moisture of the sub- and the better condition of the soil woil. So when drouth came the plants were able to keep themselves supplied ith moisture that their smaller companions could not reach.

Moisture is not added by the manure, but the plant is enabled to reach moisture by the manure. Manured land is more friable, and is therefore more easily worked. It is more easily penetrated by the roots of the plants which, at 20 cents per bushel, makes in search of food. There is yet another the sum of $2, which would be 10 per reason why potato land should be well manured. That is that the potatoes drainage. may be smooth in form and devoid of protuberances or buttons. These protuberances are supposed to be caused by a check in growth, such as lack of a food supply would cause. With a good supply of manure in the soil the plants develop large feeding powers and are thus able to give a constant tleman. We now have special implesupply of food to the developing tu- ments for special purposes, and of all

AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Caltivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof-Horticulture, Viticulture and

An Estimate on Land Drainage. At the last convention of the Illinois Clay Workers' Association J. W. Billingsley read a paper, a part of which, as reported in the Drainage

Journal, was as follows: We may claim that a well-drained soil will conserve the moisture in the air by causing it to condense and adhere to the fine particles of soil in the passage of the air down to the drain. Besides, there are other benefits which might be named to advantage, but with practical men the question will be, will it pay as a money investment? That is, will the money expended in betterment of the soil that the increasof corn for the past ten years—some years more and some years less-if he the increased yield of his crops for the next ten years, with good husband-like care, bring enough more in cash to pay a satisfactory interest on the investment? This is the question which we undertake to answer. It is not enough to say "yes." The practical business man wants the figures showing the cost and the returns. In solving the question suppose that we take A's forty acres of land, which has been in cultivation for the past twenty years. It will be admitted that the virgin richness of the soil has been to some extent exhausted. The soil is now of average quality, the humus has been washed out until it is easily compacted, and breaks up cloddy after a day or two of drying weather; it often requires repeated harrowing and rolling to make it fine and ready for planting or sowing the seed. During the season of cultivating the corn crop if the weather is rainy the soil is seldom in condition to run the cultivators. If the season turns off dry then the cultivation will be difficult, because of the hardness and cloddy nature of the land, and if the dry weather is long continued the crop will be greatly damaged. Exactly this condition has prevailed for the past few years. Some seasons the yield has been cut fully fifty per cent, and then when the season was favorable the crop yield was much above the average.

When "A" completed the tile drainage of forty acres, the cost figured up as follows: Drain tile, 26,400 pieces, cost..$400

Cost per acre, $20. In this estimate 660 pieces or forty rods of tile are required to the acre, the drains being 66 feet apart, the tile costing $10 per acre. It is also estimated that $10 will pay for the digging night perhaps call them a little coarse, work. We are aware of the fact that in other localities less. We think the sum named fairly represents the averlooked to for vitality and constitution. state (Illinois) and in many localities age cost of laying drain tile in this in other states.

The work of draining the forty acres being completed "A" has an investways held the lead as a fertilizer for ment of $20 per acre, or $800 in the forty acre field. After completing the work "A" cannot reasonably expect to grow as large a crop the first year after draining the land as will be realized the third or succeeding years. A year or two is required to make the soil open and porous between the drains, especially midway between the drains. So we take a period of ten vears and take an average crop as the basis of calculation. If the crop grown is corn we may facilitates the work of cultivating the corn. The work of cultivation may go on in a few hours after a heavy rainfall, when the land is well underdrained. We might claim a credit of $2 per acre in the less labor required to plant and cultivate the crop, but will not include this very satisfactory credit. We will estimate an average increased yield of ten bushels per acre, cent interest on the money invested in

Use of the Weeder.

In the recent developments along the line of agriculture, there is no branch of the industry which has received more careful attention than has been given to the improvement of agricultural implements, says Country Genthese improved farm tools there are none destined to prove of more value in Hog Cholera Cures.—At a recent their line than the weeder. Every time the soil is stirred plant food is set free. This past year at the Cornell University Experiment Station a plat of oats that received shallow tillage three times, gave a yield of 61 bushels per acre, while a plat adjoining, not receiving the tillage, gave only 37 bushels per acre. We are coming to believe more and more in the Lois-Weedon system or the cultivation of grain crops.

sowing grain, a heavy rain will so pack the soil that the tender plants have not the force to get to the surface. The surface crust must be broken and many hesitate about using the harrow because of the severity of its work. The weeder can be used here to advantage, the surface crust broken, small weeds destroyed, and the struggling grain plants liberated. In raising corn for the silo it is found advantageous to thorough drainage add so much to the plant the corn in rows one way. By the proper use of the weeder and cultivator a corn crop may be grown without a stroke of hand labor. The subject of sugar beets is now coming to attract more or less attention in the state. The question most concerning the production of beets is how can they be raised with greatest economy? If hand work and hand weeding is largely required, the expense of production will be too great. On soils adapted to the growing of sugar beets the weeder works most efficiently. When the beets are small and before thinning, if the weeder is brought into requisition a large part of the hand work of weeding and thinning may be saved. It must not be expected that large half-grown weeds will be destroyed; they will be made to grow all the faster. The only effectual implement then is the plow. But for destroying weeds when small, myriads of them may be conquered by the ju-

If they are a litstruction of bee pastures in this manner actually occurred near Delaware. Rightly then it may be asked. How shall we rank sweet clover? To answer this we must consider where sweet clover grows and what is its character. Sweet clover grows spontaneously along tramped roadsides, even to the wheel ruts in abandoned land anywhere. When found in meadcept when the ground has been tramped by stock when wet. It grows by preference in old brick yards. It may be grown in fields by proper tillage. The character of sweet clover may be now determined. Viewing it in no other light we thus see that sweet clover grows luxuriantly in places where few or no other plants flourish. But it belongs to the great class of leguminous plants, which are capable, by the aid of other organisms, of fixing atmospheric nitrogen and storing it in the plant tissues. It belongs with the clovers and it may thus be used to improve the land upon which it grows, and this appears to be its mission. It occupies lands that have become un-> plant, capable of increasing fertility of land. How shall sweet clover be treated? The character determined, the treatment to be accorded this clover plant is really settled. The plant is the farmer's friend, to be utilized and not to be outlawed. The plant grows and spreads rapidly. So do red clover, white clover, timothy, blue grass and other forage plants, but sweet clover grows where they do not; it indicates lack of condition for the others. Viewed in this way it is to be treated as preparing unfitted lands for other crops. It may be mown a short time before coming into bloom and cured for hay. Stock will thrive upon it if confined to it until accustomed to it. The roadsides, if taken when free from dust, may be made almost as profitable as any other area in clover by cutting the sweet clover and curing for

My friends, one-half of the trouble in the world today comes from the fact that people do not know their place, or, finding their place, will not stay in it. CHINESE LADIES ENTERTAIN.

Semi-Public Dinner Given to Several European Ladies.

Two years ago who would have believed in ten Chinese ladies of distinction from various parts of the vast empire inviting some fifty or so European ladies of different nationalities to a large semi-annual dinner, and not only inviting them, but themselves sitting down with them, conversing with them as far as the exigencies of language permitted, and partaking of the foreign fare in regular European style, knives and forks, champagne and flower-spread tablecloths all included? But it has taken place, says the Boston Transcript. The dinner was held in the largest dining hall in Chang So Ho's garden. All the foreign consuls' wives were invited, together with a certain number of missionary ladies and a few others. There was a goodly gathering of Chinese ladies, with a little sprinkling of natural footed Manchus, and, although when dinner was announced a certain number of gentlemen kindly superintending arrangements called out, "Foreign ladies to this side because it is warmer!" yet Chinese and European ladies sat down fairly mixed. There were several little girls at the banquet, three especially noticeable in vapor colored satin gowns gleaming with pearls, so as to produce quite a moonbeam effect as they were carried away in their men attendants' arms, under the electric light, the rouge on their little faces preventing any one from noticing the effect that crippling had there. Women servants waited behind many of the Chinese ladies to light their pipes for them, etc. otherwise the dinner was entirely served by men. For hundreds of years now the Chinese have treated their womankind as a negligible quantity, and yet, with all their neglect and suppression, no impartial person could look around and not be struck by the quiet dignity of the Chinese ladies among what must have been to them very different surroundings.

Not long ago we read a carefully written pamphlet, the author of which is a prominent eastern republican, in which it was advanced the same idea in his Boston lecture. He said of slavery: "The moment wages descend to a point barely sufficient to support the laborer and his family, capital cannot afford to own labor, and it must cease. Slavery ceased in England in obedience to this law, and not from any regard to liberty or humanity. The increase of population in this country may produce the same results and American slavery, like that of England, may find its euthanasia in the general prostration of all labor."

In other words, chattel-slavery might find a natural death in wage-slavery. As a purely economic question, where wages are low and employment uncertain, capital cannot afford to own and take care of the laborer. The time has arrived, in New England, under the wage-system, when competition has reduced wages to a point less than "barely sufficient to support the laborer and his family," and the problem of the unemployed has become a very serious one for solution in this country. Chattel slavery is dead, but its successor, the wage system, is a failure in so far as the well-being of those dependent upon it for a comfortable living and a chance to

What next? There is but one steady and steadfast employer of labor, and that is the Land. Labor intelligently applied to the Land is the only sure means of a living, and the great social and industrial question of the near future will be, how can land and labor be brought together without paying tribute to the landlord? Will the single tax do it? Thus far it is the only means to that end which has been suggested. Production by machinery has and the result proving the Ypsilantians already driven more than one-half of the wage earners needed in a making a given quantity of goods out of employment, and reduced the ability of both the employed and Heigho 12 9-10. cause of what is called over-production. The real fault with the wage system is that it increases the number and poverty of the dependent classes, and is, in fact, another form of slavery. - Jackson Patriot.
